1. Write a short note on each of the following in not more than 150 words.

10 x 5 = 50

(a) Limitations of Indological approach

Indological approach involves systematic study of Indian society through literary sources and ancient texts. The fundamental premise of Indology rests on assumption that Indian society and culture is unique, it cannot be explained by European methods, thus book method is preferred to infer the society. e.g. George, Dumont

Limitations

① Sociological romanticism i.e. providing an ideal and typical image of society e.g. portrayal of Tajmani system as egalitarian.

② Hindu-centric and Brahmin centric approach often leading to top-bottom view of society.

③ Veracity of ancient texts often debatable e.g. claim of Chandbayan in Prithviraj Raso seem exaggerated.

④ Many of ^{traditional} books are 3000-2000 years old leading to a static picture of Indian society.

⑤ Influenced by vested interests leading to value bias by colonial administrators and nationalist Indians.

However, recently Wendy Danziger, Devdutt Patnaik and Roula Jhappan are modifying Indology to address these defects. e.g. Book Hindus: An alternate History by Wendy Danziger.

1. (b) Caste mobility' in India

Caste mobility is an ancient fact in India according to K.M. Panikar. Even in later Vedic period, Indras and Vaishya had their distinct Gods and sages like Valmiki transitioned to upper ~~caste~~ ^{caste} through intellectual development

Caste mobility is driven by following factors -

- ① Marriage → providing mobility avenues for low caste women through Anuloma marriage (hypergamy)
- ② Warfare → Kshatriya designations given to Greek invaders like Meander and Heliadoms.

③ Land ownership → M. Srinivas cites example of Reddy in Madras who gained upward mobility by owning land parcels.

④ Political mobilization → Examples of self respect movement, Mahar mobilization and Justice movement leading to reservation for Dalits in Mysore

⑤ Education - has been acting as catalyst for mobility. eg. Adi Dravidian gaining mobility through education in Trichyram (Andre Beteille)

⑥ Migration, Industrialization and Urbanization along with state policies has led to mobility like Shanans of Tamil Nadu. Sanskritization led to upward mobility of Fatwas in Agra.

However, caste dynamics stay in private lives despite the mobility - Harold Gould

1. (c) Functions and dysfunctions of the family as an institution

Family is the primary kinship unit which performs aspects of social, economic, educational and reproductive functions.

As an institution, family is functional in following ways.

- ① Social control function by regulating behaviour of younger members and helping in value transmission
- ② Providing emotional control and preventing alienation of family members in increasingly diverse society.
- ③ Family members often act as jural units and transform into warfare groups in tribal area (Evans Pritchard)
- ④ Mother and Father act as primary reference individuals for kids in infancy, rendering a consistent social reality.

- ① Promote interpenetration and solidarity in wider society through socialization

Dysfunctional aspects

- ① Hivedita Menon argues that universalization of family promotes patriarchy due to gender role confinement and domestic violence
- ② Marxists like Oscar Wilson criticize family as a capitalism perpetrating machinery which inculcate obedience and suppress creativity
- ③ Acting as an electric circuit in metropolitan due to increasing stress and children becoming scapegoat
- ④ Krishna Kumar claims that family affiliation breed corruption in politics. Hence family is a multifaceted and evolving institution.

1. (d) Analyze the changing nexus between caste and tribe.

Caste and tribe have a muddling relationship marked by nexus and divergence from spatial to temporal changes in society.

① Earlier tribes and caste were seen in form of continuum. e.g. George believed tribes to be backward Hindus lagging behind caste epistemology.

② F.G. Bailey also approached caste and tribes as continuum with caste marked by hierarchy and heredity while tribes by egalitarianism and kinship.

④ Weber believed ~~caste~~ tribe becomes caste when it loses its territorial significance.

However this nexus has been affected as reflected in following studies -

① Mandelbaum through his study of Milpin showed that now tribes have also acquired hereditary and hierarchy in limited manner.

② Jana Shapats have been incorporated into Hindu movements yet they don't call themselves as Hindu. They are called Hindu by outsiders only.

③ Tham tribes of Himalayas and Megi of Himachal Pradesh have mingled successfully in caste fold. Recent combined effort of caste and tribes in Ganjam district of Odisha against caste violence indicate evolving nexus between both.

1. (e) Islamic diffusion gave birth to emergence of new great and little traditions. Examine.

Islamic diffusion in India, ^{was} often driven by Islamization, it refers to lower strata Hindus and tribal Hindus opting for Islamic conversion through change in customs and value systems.

Often described as parallel process to Sanskritization, Islamic diffusion also is a cultural process, ~~not~~ ^{without} much structural significance. Yashendra Singh calls it a heterogeneous source of micro-level change.

Originally, Islam was different from Hinduism as it was messianic, non hierarchical and non-idolatry, but its Persian form had already imbibed some form of stratification before coming to India.

At micro level, the Islamization gave rise to little traditions of Helakhor, Tulaha, & etc retaining their caste features even after converting into Ahle. Similarly Arzals were considered untouchables by Ashrafs which created multiple little traditions in Islamic systems.

At macro level, Islamic diffusion infused patrimonial system of justice, reinforced patriarchy, and retained feudalism. According to M. N. Srinivas and Yashwantrao Chavan, Islamic diffusion did not lead to breakdown of existing dynamics, rather Islam itself underwent a change, developing specific-ation like Hinduism.

Recently, tabligh movement is calling for revival of Islamic solidarity by shedding vertical aspirations and consolidating.

2. (a) The idea of the Indian village as represented in the earlier writings of the colonial administrators has been critiqued by many scholars. Discuss. 20

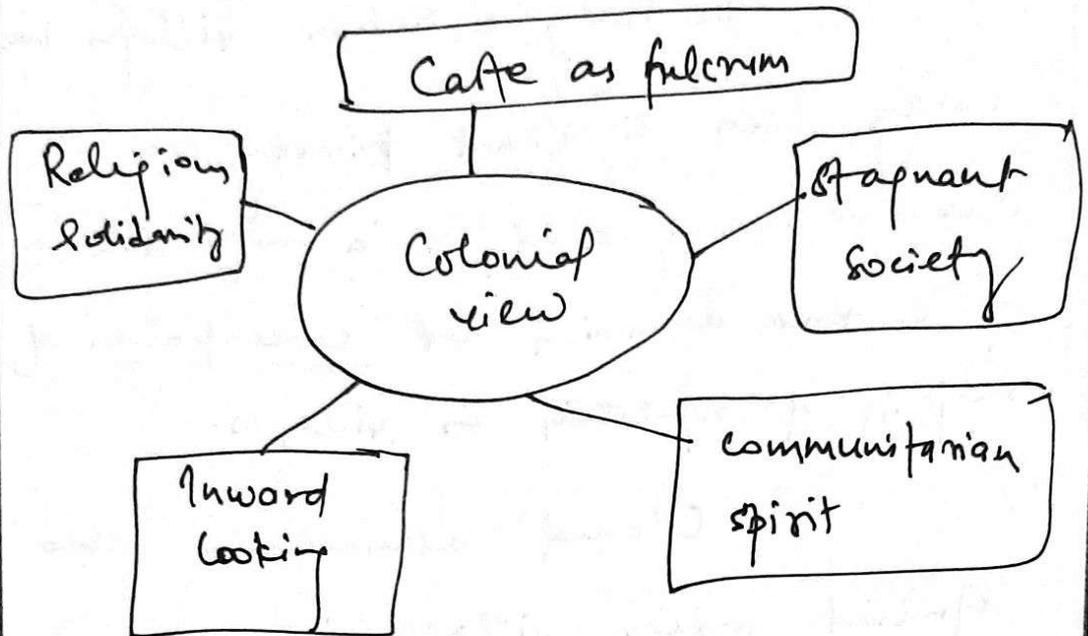

The Study of Indian villages has always been significant primarily due to two reasons - land as a major source of economic dynamism and concentration of majority of population in villages.

Colonial administrators also studied Indian villages in order to devise an organic system and land settlement in villages. However, the initial views of colonial administration like Maine, Powell, Metcalfe were based on Indological sources. This reliance on book view resulted in a broad ideal and typical view.

Metcalfe approached village as little republics largely Ateli is their independent of any foreign relations and self sufficient in production

This view was reflected in Dixey's field study also; in which he studied villages of United Provinces and analysed Tajmani system. This perspective inferred a largely harmonious portrait of Tajmani system and caste relations.

However this view was described as value loaded and product of colonial bias by Indian nationalists.

A.R. Desai challenged the harmonious construct painted by colonial administrators and brought out the structural cleavages driven by caste and gender in villages. He also ~~also~~ portrayed exploitative aspects of Tajwani system.

Similarly, Andre Betelle says that colonial view of static village can be refuted primarily on three grounds - existence of village exogamy, migration and inter-village economic ties. He shows it in his study of Sripuram village of Tanjore where caste dynamics were vastly different from book view of colonials.

M.N. Srinivas believed that the picture painted by colonials was dictated by Varna view of caste in villages due to which villages seemed as top-down.

Contract where a consistent group of elites dominated the others. However, in reality, the political mobilization^{by middle class} was evident before colonial arrival.

He cites attempts of villagers to oppose a village construction project as an example of political mobilization existing in Rampur.

Hence, colonial view of static village was discarded and modified by Indian scholars to yield a more contemporary picture of reality.

2. (b) "India's Nationalism was the result of the material conditions created by the British Colonialism". Examine the statement with respect to AR Desai's work.

A.R. Desai in his seminal work "Social background of Indian Nationalism" defines Indian nationalism in Marxist perspective, evolving from material conditions produced by Colonial rule.

British colonialism was an attempt to replace existing feudal relations of production by a capitalist system of production. This was manifested in policies like private ownership, commodification of land, new land settlement and cash based revenue. These policies led to proletarianization of peasants - creating two distinct and novel classes - moneylenders/absentee landlords at top and agrilabours at bottom. This was further magnified by de-industrialization induced by colonial rule due to adverse tariffs on Indian indigenous industry.

Thus, two mainstays of India's pre-capitalist production - agriculture and handloom industry was destroyed resulting in material deprivation of different classes, unifying them against common enemy. They were joined by feudal landlords who were deprived of their lands by use of Quo-warranto. Thus, British policies, inadvertently, created material conditions unifying different strata and classes together, leading to nationalism; led by aristocrats and upper class bourgeoisie middle class.

This view is often contended due to apathy of dialectic approach towards role of culture in nationalism. According to Ghanshyam Saha, movements by Tilak and Lala Lajpat Rai were cultural movements which induced and crystallized relative deprivation of masses; unifying them in single strand through festivals like Ganesh Chaturthi.

Another critique of A.P. Desai is that it ignores the role of education and press in rise of Indian nationalism.

Verma argues that materialism is not unique to Indian culture, but western education and revolutionary literature was something which ignited Indian nationalism.

Gail Omvedt believes that Desai's model of nationalism represents reduction of Indian movement to a myopic perspective in the effort to accentuate material deprivation. Desai ignores the caste and gender strains in Indian nationalism struggle.

However, despite the critique, Desai's perspective produced an entirely novel perspective towards Indian nationalism in Indian history discipline.

2. (c) Secularization of caste is essentially a modern phenomenon. Discuss. 10

Secularization of caste refers to declining significance of ritual aspects of caste (like purity and pollution) and emerging role of secular aspects (like wealth, education)

→ M.N. Srinivas was the first to provide the theory of caste undergoing secularization. He cited example of Okkalings, Jats, Gurjars who leveraged land reforms and improved secular mobility to climb in caste ladder.

→ Secularization of caste is visible in public spaces like education institutes where Dalits and Brahmins are studying together.

→ Rajni Kothari says that federal politics and regional groups have freed lower caste from stigma of pollution.

→ In factories and offices, occupational demands have resulted in diverse social representation (Andre Betelle) and caste mitigation

→ Dalit entrepreneurship and technological revolution has led to breakdown of caste dominated institutions like bondage labour and Jajmani.

→ Modern movements led by social reformers e.g. Pravara movement, SNDP movement provided for temple entry for lower caste

→ operation of castes as interest groups in reservation demands and identity politics further promote secularization of caste

However, Harold Gould and R.K. Mukherjee's study show the dominance of ritual aspects in North India.

3. (a) Caste as a social reality is viewed differently by Gandhi and Ambedkar. Their perspectives diverge but meet at a common end. Discuss. 20

Caste system is the most ancient form of stratification with diverse perspectives and ever-evolving forms of social commentary on its structure.

However two strands of social thoughts are particularly relevant in caste study in Indian society - Gandhian and Ambedkarite.

Gandhian view of caste is a refined view through Varna lens. He believes that occupation based differentiation as envisaged in Varna system would be productive for Indian social settings. However caste system was a perverted form of Varna scheme which needs to be eradicated. He made sustained efforts to bridge the gap through reformatory approach. He ~~did~~ performed tasks of lower castes like cleaning and eating ^{menial work} and referred to lower castes as Harajans (sons of lord/god). His solution lied in reformation of value system and gradual change of heart in Hindu society, ^{viewing} with every task with equal respect.

On the other hand, Ambedkar believed in radical change, i.e. change of system. He believed that Hindu society is beyond repair and caste based stratification cannot be abolished by mere euphemism like Harijan status. He emulated upper caste practices like wearing modern clothes, dress, education in modern institutes and lifestyle of dignity. He sought his reference group in western society and used political mobilization as a tool to annihilate caste system.

According to Christopher Tafenott, Ambedkar's perspective was a form of alternate revolution while Gandhian methods were reformative on the lines of upper caste, without inviting the ire of Brahmins and Kshatriyas. That's why Ambedkar chose an alternative caste origin - Brokenmen theory.

Despite their mutual debates and divergence in approach, both of them had same purpose - to alleviate the suffering of lower caste by providing them social and political protection, so that they could leverage social mobility.

Even their moves can be seen in parallel. For example, Ambedkar's Mahad Satyagraha and bringing of Manusmriti was symbolism parallel to Gandhi cleaning septic tanks. Thus, both of them had same vision although differing paths - Gandhi emphasizing on value loaded approach, Ambedkar emphasizing on value neutral secular approach.

3. (b) Compare and contrast the perspective of Andre Beteille and M.N Srinivas with respect to 'study of caste'. 20

The treatise on caste system can be approached through two differing yet comprehensive approach of Beteille and Srinivas. Both of them utilized the model of field study to capture dynamics of caste stratification in countryside.

And M.N. Srinivas was the first sociologist who challenged the dominant paradigm of caste analysis through Indological perspective, by providing field study conclusion of caste in Rampura (A Remembered village)

His fundamental premise was to infuse dynamism to static conception of caste by providing alternative to Varna theory. He introduced dominant caste and Sanskritization to emphasize on secular mobility in caste hierarchy eg. Vokkaliga peasants, Reddy in Madras.

He also differentiated Varnization of caste at upper level to casteization at lower level i.e. political mobilization at macro level providing interpretive aspects to caste.

Andre Beteille in his work "Caste, class and power" also challenges the prevailing view by analyzing caste system through trinitarian perspective of caste, class and power. He mentions how the Adi Dravidians, once considered lowest his caste hierarchy have prepared by leveraging land markets, education and employment opportunities. He also refutes and challenges value based thesis on caste system by providing that value system of a society continuously evolves and is never fixed.

Beteille

Srinivas

1) Weberian approach of stratification

1) Durkheim's influence is visible in caste solidarity thesis.

2) Did not project any caste as inferior or superior

2) Promoted top down view by portraying upper caste as desirable

3) emphasized change induced by land reforms.

3) Also uses Indological source in some instance

4) Provides in detail about practices and lifestyle of Adi Dravidians

4) Doesn't mention much about lower caste lifestyle

5) Says caste is entrenched due to enhanced visibility by media and politics.

5) predicted end of caste in his final lecture by citing example of Bengaluru IT industrial city (Obituary of caste)

Thus, both DeFille and Srinivas provided a diverse perspective by challenging the cultural view of caste propounded by Dumont and George respectively

3. (c) Tribes are generally seen to be society based on equality, but forms of social differentiation exists within tribes too. Examine. 10

Tribes are defined as closely knit communities with strong kinship bonds.

Usually tribe-caste differentiation is seen through egalitarianism and hierarchy discourse where tribes are seen to be equality communion. However elements of social differentiations are visible in tribes also-① Dhebar committee points out the pitiful and marginalized existence of particularly vulnerable tribal groups like Jarawas, Sentinels etc which are further pushed down strata in tribal societies due to their isolated and backward status.

VISION

- ② Historical practices like Criminal Tribes Act led to stigma and subjugation for certain tribes now known as Denotified and by nomadic tribes; discriminated ~~with~~ fellow tribes.
- ③ In Bulandshahr gangrape case, the plight of Bawariya community was shown which was labelled notorious due to DNT Act.
- ④ Mandelbaum observed elements of hypergamy in Miljisi tribes.
- ⑤ Santhals and Bhagats along with Raj Gond (partially Hinduised) also exhibit social differentiation based on caste economic status.

However despite the examples, the differentiation in tribal societies is not as institutionalized and entrenched as in caste system.

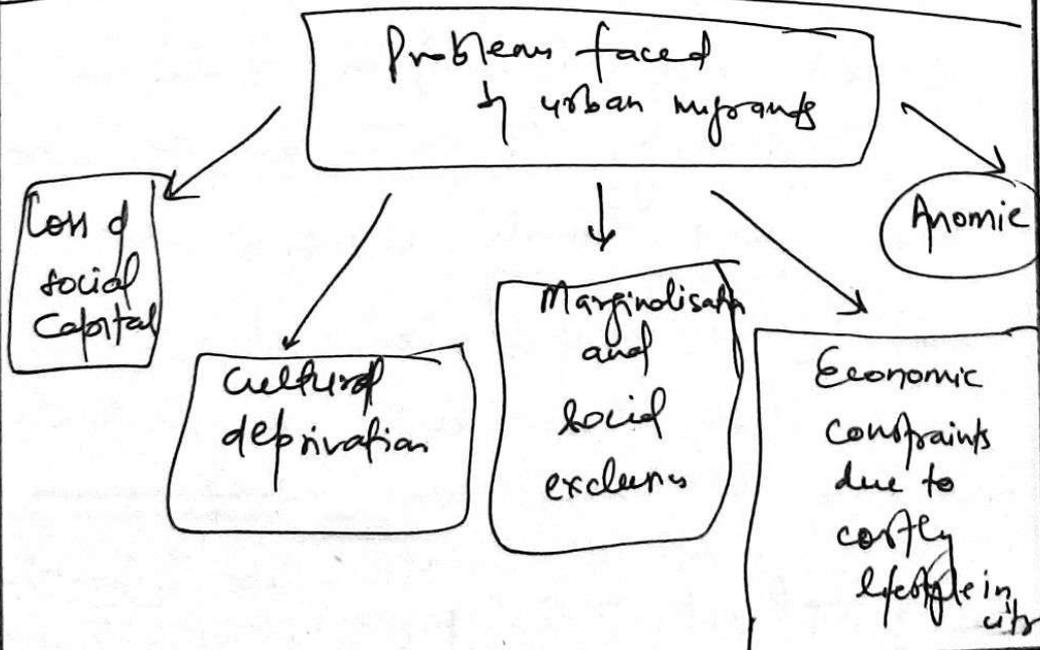

5. Write a short note on each of the following in not more than 150 words.

(a) The Urban migrant and 'ritual' tug of home.

10 x 5 = 50

India has about 30% of its population involved in rural to urban migration (Census 2011), primarily driven by education and economic reasons.

Urban migrants are often concentrated in the fringes in case of industrial workers and rural accommodation in case of students.

Urban migrants in India differ from western ones due to "ritual tie" of home i.e.

urban migrants continue their affiliation and attachment ties with home despite being distant away. Morris and Morris Study revealed that evidence of workers often went back to their villages for ritual obligations of or familial functions, thus Proletarian consciousness could never develop in India.

Similarly, Connell et al observed that joint family members who migrate to cities alone often feel more deprivation and marginalisation resorting to cults and sects.

Recent attempts like urban spreads regenerated into social hubs to mitigate anomie

5. (b) "Social change can be brought through public policy". Critically analyze.

Public policy act as vital driver of social change through following manner—

① It can initiate instrumental attitudinal change through acts like Hindu succession act aimed at countering patriarchy in society. However it also led to dysfunctional aspect of female ② through special marriage act and liberal divorce laws, society is shifting from straight to social monogamy.

③ Public policy of affordable urban housing is leading to increased migration and disintegration of joint households, causing feminization of poverty (बेला गुलाबि)

④ Land reforms led to rise of middle ~~class~~ caste - Bullock Capitalists (Rudolph and Rudolph)

⑤ LPG reform of 1991 led to women breaking shackles of patriarchy and participating in service sectors liberally.

⑥ Acts like FRA, 2006 aim at delivery of social justice for tribals.

However efficacy of public policy as change driver is limited -

① Andre Beteille says that policy ^{direction} but and laws indicate drivers of change but it is public which decides course of change. eg dysfunctional effect of Vishaka guidelines - reduced recruitment of females.

② Upeendra Bakshi says policy is skewed towards already empowered.

③ Utsa Patnaik highlights gender bias

5. (c) "Slum is the lifeline of Urbanity". Comment.

Slums are defined as urban dwellings in which residences are dilapidated, poorly congested and lacking amenities of sanitations and hygiene necessary for well being of inhabitants. India has 17% of its population residing in slums.

Lifeline of urbanity

① M.S. Gore calls slums as culture of prosperity due to their contribution to cheap labour force in urban areas.

② M.S.A. Rao also highlights structural perspective of slums which makes capitalism in cities successful.

③ The largest slum of Asia - Dharavi has a turnover of above 700 $ billion

④ Dabba Wallah of Mumbai to servicing maids of Delhi, all reside in urban fringes and serve dominantly middle class household.
(Neem-Bussa)
Fewer Marxists like A.P. Desai believe that slums are deliberate product of profit race caused by capitalism. Ghanshyam Shah point at moral apathy of city dwellers by pointing out need of slum rehabilitation and futility of golf courses.

Indologists like George labelled slums as deviants from Hindu culture.

5. (d) Briefly discuss the concept of Ethno-nationalism along with suitable examples.

Ethno-nationalism refers to a sense of common consciousness in ethnic communities which is followed by demands of sovereign territory for themselves.

Hence ethno-nationalism can be described as increased loyalty towards one's ethnicity at the cost of wider national consciousness.

Serbia is example of ethno-national region. In India, demands of Naga Secession and Khalistan movement indicate ethnonationalism in India.

Drivers of ethnonationalism

① When culture of ethnic tribes don't find place in mainstream, culture deprivation leads to ethno-nationalism

② Strong historical ties also lead to ethnic consciousness especially wider regional ~~national~~ belonging e.g. Bodoland

③ A sense of internal colonialism due to discrimination or neglect of central power - e.g. Mizhals demanding national flag

④ Resource mobilization theory - Green revolution leading to wealthy farmers, ^{and political leaders} culminating in sense of secession due to resource surplus - Khudatan movement.

Ethno-nationalism can be dysfunctional if it borders on chauvinism and hate; thus (Udham Singh, Mahanta) it needs to be sustained.

5. (e) Give a brief overview of the "Evolution and persistence of communalism in Indian Society".

Communalism refers to political mobilization of sectarian beliefs to achieve vested interests.

It is also described as increased loyalty towards one's own community at expense of wider ones.

Evolution in India

India has been land of diversity which was sustained by Sufism and Bhakti movements.

* However evolution of communalism can be traced back to colonial era.

* Racial race theory aimed at deepening divide.

* Mosley Hindu reforms and separate electorate.

Don't write anything in the margin (as per the eggs or forest)

- ③ Communal organizations like Hindu Mahasabha and Muslim League providing platform for communalism
- ④ Bitter 1947 partition riots.

Evolution of communalism in India by Khushwant Singh

→ Reason for persistence

Ashish Nandy and TN Madan believe that communalism is likely to persist in India due to Anglo

8. (a) "Middle class has been taken as the cornerstone of a stable democracy". Discuss in context of Indian society. 20

T.K. Oommen has described middle classes as harbingers of new democracy due to their active involvement in contemporary state politics and public discourse.

Middle class stratum is the one often "sandwiched" between property owning capitalist class and working class. India has about 20-30% of its population as working class middle class. In India's society, middle class has been instrumental in realizing promise of functional democracy.

- * Ever since colonial era, it was middle class created by education and industrial jobs which proved to be flag bearers of nationalism in times to come (Pawan Verma)
- * The middle class is the one which does not manifest its caste character to a greater degree, resulting in liberal faith and cosmopolitan value promotion.
- * Xaxa says that leadership provided by middle class has been instrumental in democratic movements like Thakhand movement led by Tajpal Singh.
- * Nivedita Menon highlights role of middle class women during emergency (1970-1980) where they led anti-price rise front against government.

* This class provides stability by providing a sense of "safety valve" for government where ventilation and frustrations are resolved through policy formulation.

* B.B. Misra opines that post liberalization, the new middle class is driving Indian economy through its changing lifestyle i.e. fluidity of consumption pattern.

* Amartha Sen and Gurucharan Das hail it as proponent of marginalised interests and infusion of novel ideas through rational outlook.

However, Andre Beteille is cautious of middle class and warns of romanticism towards them.
According to him, middle class is continuously engaged in competition due to globalization, which could be dysfunctional in a diverse society like India. Rajiv Kohran also claims middle class as amnesia to poverty and self centric.

Thus, Yogendra Singh rightly puts middle class as proponents of modernity and democracy in India.

8. (b) The lopsided, iniquitous, and environmentally destructive processes of development has given rise to environmental movements in India. Examine. 20

According to Guha and Gadgil, environment consciousness is an age old facet of India but environment movements are fairly new in our history; reason being our sustainable coexistence with nature in part.

The development is usually defined as change in functional or desirable manner but displacement and ecological destruction induced by development highlights that it is neither equitably functional nor inclusively desirable.

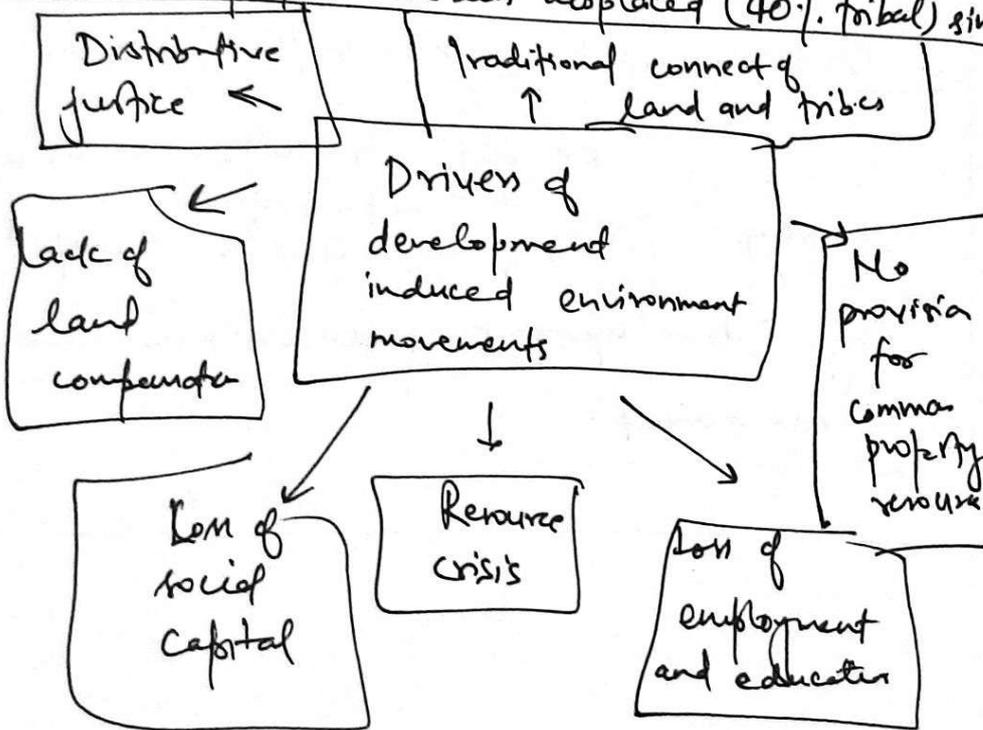

According to Thakkar and Taneja, around 85% of displacement induced by development has been faced by tribals alone. The fragmentation of tribal habitat brought due to introduction of Railways has led to Khond and Santal rebellions in the past.

Anudhati Roy cites the example of Narmada Bachao Andolan which started as a projec. movement for proper rehabilitation but turned into ^{anti-project i.e.} environmental projece one due to lack of land to be compensated. Similar propositions are drawn by P. Vardhana who opined that green revolution has caused long term damage to Punjab and Haryana manifested in climate change movements today.

anti-pollution and

The lopsided nature of development was manifested in Tharphand movement where lack of infrastructure and connectivity in tribal region led to social movement against policy induced development. According to Naxal, 3 crore people have been displaced (40% tribal) since independence.

These movements are not only limited to lower strata or tribals. Example like Friends of Doon movement or NIMBY (Not in my backyard movement) indicate that environmental consciousness has permeated lifestyle of upper strata and acting as driver of environmental movements of India.

Recent protests regarding Aarey forests ^{for metro project} is another example of development induced environment movement.

8. (c) "Surrogacy is both a need and source of Income". Discuss in context of Indian society.

10

Surrogacy is defined as a process where an intending couple hires or seeks assistance from a third person (usually women) to undergo child bearing for the couple. This process is assisted by Artificial reproductive technology.

Surrogacy as need of Income

- ① Usually, lower strata in urban society is involved in surrogacy
- ② Surrogacy promises quite significant amount of income for poor household, usually run by women
- ③ Destitute women, widows or low caste urban migrants are the usual surrogate mothers.

- ① This strata is usually excluded by government schemes hence it often falls back to surrogacy as safety net

Source of Income

- ① However, not every surrogate mother is absolutely deprived.
- ② Many underground black markets are also sprawling in metropolises like Mumbai.
- ③ It has been made a steady source of income by many women which is detrimental for their health and child's health as well.

Recent step to ban commercial surrogacy is a good step to curb the malpractice and dysfunction associated.
