Section 'A' Reading

[20 Marks]

1. Read the following passage carefully:

[8]

From Rameswaram to the Rashtrapati Bhavan, it's been a long journey. Taking to Nona Walia on the eve of Teacher's Day, President Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam talks about life's toughest lessons learnt and his mission being a teacher to the Indian youth. "A proper education would help nurture a sense of dignity and self-respect among our youth," says President Kalam.

There's still a child in him though, and he's still curious about learning new things. Life's a mission for President Kalam.

Nonetheless, he remembers his first lesson in life and how it changed his destiny. "I was studying in Standard V and must have been all of 10. My teacher, Sri Sivasubramania Iyer was telling how birds fly. He drew a diagram of a bird on the blackboard, depicting the wings, tail and the body with the head and then explained how birds soar to the sky. At the end of the class, I said, "I didn't understand." Then he asked the other students if they had understood, but nobody had understood how birds fly," he recalls.

"That evening, the entire class was taken to Rameshwaram shore," the President continues, "My teacher showed us sea birds. We saw marvellous formations of them flying and how their wings flapped. Then my teacher asked us. Where is the bird's engine and how is it powered?' I knew then that birds are powered by their own life and motivation. I understood all about birds' dynamics."

(i) When did Nona Walia talk to the President Dr. A. P. J. Abdul Kalam?

(ii) What did the teacher draw on the blackboard?

[1]

(iii) What did Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam learn when the entire class was taken to the Rameshwaram shore?

[1]

(iv) (a) Give the antonyms of:

(i) remembers

(ii) toughest.

[2]

(b) Which words in the passage mean the following:

(i) fate

(ii) forces that produce movement.

[2]

(v) What inspiration do you gain after reading about Dr. Kalam's experiences as a student?

[1]

2. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follows:

[12]

Solar energy has long struggled to compete with fossil fuels due to the high cost of solar panel production, installation and maintenance.

It is here that robots made their entry and have come in handy.

The auto industry and many other solar companies have automated the production of photovoltaic (PV) panels with robots that are more cost effective and precise. This has led to a fall in price of solar energy in recent years.

However, the savings generated by robotic production alone have not been enough to create widespread availability.

In order to create a competitive edge, many companies had to look to other areas to cut costs.

Solar company Alion has developed the "Rover," a robot that can install solar panels rows along concrete bases using only an operator and a small team to create the foundation. The robot can work continuously in the hot, sunny areas where solar panels necessarily have to be installed. This brings down the cost of installation and materials by 75 per cent over conventional methods. Once installation is complete, other robots take over the maintenance of the panels by moving across each row to wash away any surface material that may reduce the efficiency of the panel - a time-consuming task previously done by teams of people with hoses. This robotic maintenance technology is improving.

Robotic innovation is not restricted to the solar industry. Competitors in energy field like mining, oil and gas industries — are also seeking to integrate robots to cut down on their costs. Driverless trucks and trains in mines today are used to cut cost, eliminating the need to pay operators. Similarly, companies across the mining industry are looking to replace human workers at the face of the mines with robotic technology as conditions hundreds of metres below ground are often extremely dangerous. Robotic technology can be remotely operated and is cheaper.

In Canada, rig robots can now assemble an entire down-hole assembly system for obtaining oil at the bottom of the sea. Other welding robots have become more sophisticated and require near little help when making repairs. Robotics companies are now trying to replace manpower by fully automating the entire drilling process from the floor to retrieval.

The adoption of robots in the fossil fuel industry may slow solar integration in the near future by boosting competitors, but won't be able to stop it. Developed countries have committed themselves to renewable energy resources. The U.S. recently donated $4 billion in private sector funding for innovations. In emerging energy markets, solar innovations are becoming more sustainable and affordable than fossil fuels.

(i) Answer the following questions:

[2x4=8]

(a) Why is solar energy still not a preferable mode for energy generation?

(b) How are the companies using solar panels trying to cope with the cost?

(c) What are some of the areas being taken over by robots?

(d) Why is the U.S. Government donating money to private companies?

(ii) Complete the following statements with one word or phrase:

[1x4=4]

(a) Robotic technology is beneficial for mining industry because it can now get the dangerous part of the job done by robots without risking the life of human beings. Also because robotic technology can be ____

(b) Solar energy is not only renewable source of energy but also more ____.

(c) Another word used in the passage which means the same as distantly is ____.

(d) ____ is a system in which work is done with mechanical or electronic equipment and not human beings.

Annual Sports Day

By-Harshit,
(Sports Captain)
Aligarh,
21st November, 20XX

Our school held its Annual Sports Day on 21st November, 20XX. The school was beautifully decorated with coloured papers and flags. It was a mixture of sports and a few dance performances.

The Chief Guest was a National Hockey player Mr. I. K. Iyyer who declared the sports meet open at 10 a.m. The programmes began with the March past and the Oath Ceremony. It was followed by a few races, gymnastic events and drills. The students had put in their best efforts. The participants and nonparticipants sat in their pavilions, where they were given refreshments.

The Head Boy Armaan Banerjee gave Vote of Thanks and the Chief Guest appreciated and motivated everyone with his valuable words.

5. A Thirsty Crow

It was the month of June. It was very hot. A crow felt very thirsty. He flew from place to place in search of water, but found no water. As the crow was flying over a house, he saw a jug of water. As he was thirsty, he flew to it. The crow tried to drink water from the jug, but the level of the water in the jug was very low and his beak couldn't reach the water. The crow became sad. But he was a clever crow.

He saw some pebbles lying here and there on the roof. He thought of a plan. He put those pebbles one by one into the jug, thus raising the level of the water. The crow felt very happy. He drank water and flew away. His hard work and patience led him to success.

that you come along with me and I will change your life. As Ravi was living all alone and there was no one to take care of him, he agreed to go along with the old woman. She took him to her house. She asked him to have his bath and then gave him something to eat. Since her husband was the Principal of a school, she spoke to him about Ravi. She got the boy admitted in the school. And after school Ravi would come over to the old woman's house and helped her in the household chores. Ravi was good at studies and also was very good in athletics. The school encouraged his desire and he became a national level athletics champion. The old woman had seen his potential in running and this was the reason she had got him to her house. It was because of the old lady that Ravi's talent was encouraged and that it did not go waste.

13. 25th Dec. 1919,

It's Christmas today, but the town looks desolated. Not because there is no one living in it but the people living here are having bare hearts. There is not a single house which hasn't lost someone near and dear. All because of this nasty war. It has destroyed everything. Those who survived after the war are not more than walking dummies. I think it will take years for them to come out of the terrors of the war. But life goes on. I felt happy when I saw my neighbour taking care of Mr. Johnson, who is left all alone in this world after his only son died in the war. The war has left its permanent mark on our hearts but at the same time we realize the true worth of human life, when there is a fear of losing each other. -Jim
