

An Ideal Student

Or

Duties of an Ideal Student

---

8 Best Essays on” An Ideal Student”

Essay No. 01

An ideal student is the wealth and future of his nation, the hope of his family, and the pride and glory of his school or college. He endears himself to all by his temperament, qualities of head and heart, and knowledge. He respects his teachers and is helpful and friendly to his class-fellows. Such good and bright students are the gems of an institution. They are the pillars of a nation. Such students become ideal citizens, politicians, statesmen, and leaders.

An ideal student always takes an active part in academic as well as in extra-curricular activities of his college. He is hard-working. He is both attentive and punctual in his duties. He goes to his school or college in time. He attends his class regularly and reads his lessons carefully. He always in the good books of his teachers. He stands first in his school or college. He winds laurels in life and brings credit to his Alma mater.

An ideal student is disciplined and obedient. At home, he obeys his parents, and at school, he obeys his teachers. He always abides by the rules and regulations of his educational institution. He is disciplined in his everyday activities of life. He avoids bad company. He often persuades bad boys from doing evil deeds. He goes not waste his time and energy in strikes and demonstrations.

An ideal student is not a book-worm. He takes an active interest in games and sports. Games and studies go side by side with him. He is fully conversant with the value and advantages of games. He knows that a sound mind lives in a sound body. He considers games an essential part of his education.

He always sticks to his right ideals and aims. 'Simple living and high thinking is the motto of his life. He does not run after cuts and fashion. He is not a film fan. He possesses a strong moral character. He is very humble, modest, and polite. He always keeps patience. He does not lose courage in the faces of them bravely. He is lovable to everyone.

An ideal student is ideal in every field. He takes part in debates, speeches, and declamation contests. He shines as a good speaker. He wins medals and trophies and thus brings credit to his school or college.

An ideal student is also a true patriot. He is prepared to serve his country's heart and soul and sacrifices himself for the welfare of his country. He does not take part in such activities as cast a slur on the name of his country. It is his deep-rooted wish that his country should occupy a place of pride among the nations of the world.

Since our country is passing through a difficult period of struggle, it is badly in need of ideal students and citizens. The nation can reach the zenith of glory if our students become ideal and participate in the task of national reconstruction. An ideal student is the spark of hope, glory, and prosperity of his country. The students of today are the leaders of tomorrow. The future of the country depends upon students only. Every student should, therefore, try to become an ideal student. An ideal student is ideal in his work, conduct, and thought.

Essay No. 02

An Ideal Student

An ideal student is one who is all-around the best student. Kamal is an ideal student in my class.

He believes in simple living and high thinking. He helps the needy and sympathizes with the poor.

He does not mix up with the bad boys. He never tells a lie. He always speaks the truth.

He is not a bookworm. He is a good player also.

He never quarrels with anybody. He is a very well-behaved boy. He loves everybody and everybody loves him.

Most of the people now think that we are real brothers. I like him the most. I am really proud of my friend.

Essay No. 03

The Responsibilities of An Ideal Student

A student can never be educated until and unless he does not put his heart and soul to the cause of education. A student is a person who devotes himself to the pursuit of knowledge and learning. The pursuit of knowledge demands hard work and full devotion. Unfortunately, the students do not realize their duties.

In practical life, only those students come out with the best colours, who have acquired maximum knowledge.

An ideal student enjoys learning. He goes deeper and deeper in search of the knowledge. He is not a bookworm. He knows that a healthy body is necessary for a healthy mind. He takes interest in all the activities that promote his physical health. He goes to the playground with, the same pleasure and enthusiasm with which he studies in the library. An ideal student is not unsocial. He loves his fellow students and participates in all the collective activities.

The ideal student respects and honours his teachers. He knows the place of teachers who are opening the gate of glories for him. He is humble and obedient. The more he learns from his teachers, the more grateful he is to them. The more knowledge he gets, the more humble he becomes. He is always regular and punctual. He does not participate in adverse and negative activities. He confines himself to his studies and tasks. He does not waste his time in useless deeds. He is kind and generous.

Essay No. 04

An ideal Student

An ideal student is one who is fully conscious of his responsibilities. A student may be very good in his studies but he need not necessarily be an ideal student. They may even prove failures in their practical life. An ideal student should believe in simple living and high thinking. This was the idea of Mahatma Gandhi. He should be bold and fearless, full of discipline and high character. He should be discerning in choosing his company and should abide by the rules and orders of his teachers. He should also be dutiful towards his parents and elders. An ideal student is also an ideal member of society. He has a duty towards his country. He is a lighthouse for the guidance of the younger generation. He is a pride of the nation.

Essay No. 05

An Ideal Student

The very word: "Student" denotes a person fond of studies. But 'studies' do not mean just bookish knowledge, but real knowledge of men, society, nature, mind etc. Such variegated knowledge can be obtained only by a person of strong mind and will, good heart, and sound health. So, the very connotation of being an ideal student is one's keen interest in developing an all-round personality.

By going into details, we can say that an ideal student has a thirst for knowledge. He has the curiosity to learn and understand new and new things about man and nature. He has a regular routine for doing everything. Thus he is regular and punctual. He gets up early in the morning, takes regular exercise, has his bath, and goes to his school and college in time. He devotes his time to studies wholeheartedly and is in the good books of his teachers whom he respects sincerely, as he respects his parents. He helps the weak students in their studies and never makes fun of them. If others outdo him, he accepts their superiority with humility. He may have a healthy competition with them, but he is never jealous of them. Similarly, he plays one or the other game, but with a sportsman's spirit.

An ideal student is very particular about his character and manners. He is truthful, honest, and frank. He does not find fault with others but tries to get rid of his own drawbacks if any. He has no evil habits like drinking, smoking, gambling, etc. He is a great patriot and is ready to die for his country. He knows that by making himself strong in body and mind, he is also serving the national cause, because, as Emerson says,

"Not gold but only men can make

A nation great and strong."

An ideal student is very studious. He knows that an idle man's brain is the devil's workshop. He does the right thing at the right time. He believes in his own sincere effort. He does not believe in underhand methods. For instance, copying in the examination can never be his motto. He is not only a voracious reader and a good player but also a good speaker and writer. He believes in bringing constant efficiency in his work. He has a positive and optimistic attitude towards life. Failures do not depress him, nor successes turn his head. He has a balanced mind and personality.

Essay No. 06

An Ideal Student

An ideal student is one who is conscious of his responsibilities and duties and is an embodiment of virtues. He is an ideal for his fellow students and is an asset to both his family and country. The motto of an ideal student is to live a simple life and think high. The one who has enough courage to face the trials and tribulations of life is a truly ideal student.

An ideal student should take a keen interest in the social services and the politics of his country. He should care for his family, as he owes them a debt, by looking after them in their old age. He should also respect his teachers and elders and should have some regard for all the religions. He must believe in the unity and integrity of his country.

An ideal student is not only a book worm but he also understands the value of keeping good health by playing games and taking part in extracurricular activities.

Moreover, he observes discipline and never takes part in rallies, strikes, or demonstrations. He selects his friends wisely. An ideal student is always ready to live up to high values in life.

Essay No. 07

An Ideal Student

Ideally, a student is that person which is involved in the study of a subject. However, in the current context, a student is a boy or girl who goes to school or college. A model or an ideal student is a child or a teenager, who possesses the following qualities. They are curiosity, intelligence, perseverance, and steadiness. These are some of the most important qualities of an ideal student. Because, it is they which inspire a student to develop himself, physically, emotionally, and intellectually. A model student works hard to overcome all the difficulties that may come his way. Curiosity makes a student look for answers to difficult questions outside his textbooks. Intelligence provides him with understanding. This in turn helps him to convert an otherwise dull subject into an exciting topic. Perseverance gives him the capacity to work continuously even in the face of heavy odds. Steadiness fills in a student the necessary seriousness about the topic under study. An ideal student is not a bookworm. He is an outgoing and amiable person. He need not be over-enthusiastic, but he definitely possesses the qualities to share and care about the sorrows and joys of his fellow students. He should be polite and respectful to his teachers. Therefore if a person aims to become an ideal student he should shed his shyness, introvert and bookish nature.

Essay No. 08

An Ideal Student

An ideal student is an embodiment of sincerity, obedience, and discipline. He seeks knowledge and loves sports. He also considers extra-curricular activities as part of his all-round personality.

The first quality of an ideal student is sincerity. He is honest with the work. He does not shirk studies. Whatever may be the assignment he tries to complete it with the best of his ability.

An ideal student is obedient. He does not question the instructions of his teachers. He trusts his elders and tries to emulate their good qualities.

Discipline forms an important part of an ideal student's life. He follows a clockwork pattern. He studies when it is the time to study and he plays when it is the time to play. He follows all the rules and regulations.

Seeking knowledge is his main task. He, therefore, attends classes regularly. He completes his assignments in time. He often visits the library to gain more knowledge about his lessons. He is very curious and tries to apply his mind upon solving difficult problems given in the class. He tries to understand nature and the world around him with the help of chapters in the books.

On the playing field, he plays according to the rules. He understands the value of sports and physical exercise, Games, and sports form a part of his daily routine.

Activities like music, debating, etc. find a special place in his curriculum. He takes part in them in order to enrich his personality. He takes this opportunity to explore new areas of information

Lastly, an ideal student believes in assisting those students who find the lessons a bit difficult to follow. He patiently explains the difficult lessons to his class-mates.

The ideal student has a complete personality. Thus on growing up he becomes an asset to the nation and the society.