

Goal of My life

Life without a noble aim is like a rudderless ship, but to choose a goal is quite an uphill task. Different people have different ambitions according to their tastes and likings because nothing is good or bad but thinking makes it so. Every seeing eye, thinking mind and feeling heart has one ambition or the other.

My greatest aim in life is to serve my country. I know that this is not as easy job, I also know that there are many ways of serving one's country. I know that the best service to my country, in the first place, would be to become a good citizen. I may choose to be a teacher, an engineer or a doctor. I may become a businessman or a politician. But whatever I become, I shall not be useful to my country, if I do not realize my rights and duties.

My first step in realizing the aim of my life, therefore would be to make myself an ideal citizen. I shall never become corrupt and shall never tolerate corruption among others. I shall always be just and fair to others. In every action I will always keep the interest of the community before my personal interest. Whenever there is a clash between my personal and social interest, I shall not press my claims. If I can live up to this idea, I would have a healthy, influence on everybody. I can bring no reform in others if I do not reform myself.

My way of serving my country would be to become a doctor and take up this profession seriously. As a doctor, I shall devote all my energies in helping my countrymen. My aim would not be to make money.

I would serve my country in another manner also. In addition to my job. I shall always be prepared to lend my support to all good causes. I would take keen interest in all the movements going on around me. I shall try to help in eradicating poverty and ignorance of my countrymen in every way. If I can afford it, I shall give financial help to organizations which carry in such work.

I know that the service of my country is difficult if I work alone and do not pool my energy with that of others. No individual, however great, is in a position to serve his country in isolation. In the world of today, great changes can be brought about, only by collective effort. Therefore, I shall take keen interest in the development of the political parties of the country. I shall study their programmes and see which one can really work for the welfare of the people. I shall then seriously make a choice and render help to the political party of my choice.

My goal in life is of a very modest nature. I know I shall be able to line up to this modest ideal. If everyone in our country, were to have the same ambition, our country would make rapid progress in no time. Thus, my ambition in life would be achieved all the more if I can persuade others to follow this very way of life. This I shall try to do by setting a personal example. All those who come in contact with me will be inspired by my way of my life. This is the best way in which we can serve our country.
