

Advantages of Telephone or

Disadvantages of Telephone

Buzz! Buzz! Buzz! Rang up the phone in my drawing room. Anxiously I picked up the receiver and gladly. I learnt that it was a call from my brother who was coming from Amritsar by Air and after a stopover of an hour at Delhi, he had to resume his journey for U.K.

What a marvelous thing the telephone is! In the shortest possible time I got the information and I availed the opportunity of meeting my brother at the aerodrome.

It is simply a personal instance. But millions of people the world over make use of the phone and are highly benefited by it. How?

A fire, unfortunately, breaks out or a house collapses in your neighborhood. You just ring up a particular number and in no time the fire brigade is there. At once the rescues operations start. Timely help saves the loss of both life and property.

You are in the school and your father has gone to his office. Some one in house meets with an accident or is seriously taken ill. The telephone is at your beck and call. Immediately the information may be sent to you and to your father. The doctor may also be sent for without any loss of time. A telephone may thus, do the needful single handed any efficiently, too: where even half a dozen persons may fail some time.

You have to go somewhere by train. The time left at your disposal is very short. But you need not worry. Just dial the required number and the taxi is at your door and the next moment you are at the station. You have already got your berth reserved on phone. How comfortable does a telephone prove to be!

It may be a matter of making appointment or taking appointment with persons you wish to meet the telephone is entirely at your disposal. It will save you from the disappointment of not meeting them at home or in the office at a particular time. What an amazing regularity and punctuality does the telephone bring in your life!

Hundred and one are the pieces of information that you have to gather every day. It may be an enquiry about the arrival of a train or the departure of a plane.

telephone would do it for you. What a great saving of time and labor does a telephone provide you!

You are enjoying your meals in the dining room and the telephone bell begins to ring. You leave your meals in the middle and attend the phone. But it turns out to be a wrong number. You put down the receiver with a bang and return to the table. How disgusting it is!

Hardly a day goes by when someone or the other does not call upon you with a request for using your phone, If you deny you are termed most discourteous. If you charge, you are deemed inconsiderate. If you entertain free, you pay for others.

What a fun it is! those who haven't got a phone are desirous of having it. Those whom already posses it, desire to be free from it.

It is rather difficult to decide whether it is a blessing or a nuisance.