

Imagine that you are a statue in a park

I am happy that I standing here in a park and not at the crossing of the roads. I am happy for I am aloof from the din of the vehicle and noise of heavy traffic. Moreover, I have all around me beauties of nature. No doubt, I am exposed to the inclemencies of hot, cold and rainy weathers, but I do not feel miserable, as have become habituated to them. All the same, If there is moderate heat or cold and light showers, I enjoy them. When there is nobody in the park birds give me company. Time has taught me to understand their language. They also have their problems and worries. How I wish I could help them! They are so helpless and innocent creature. When they play and chatter near about me on the grass below, I feel immensely pleased. I never feel angry if they sit on my shoulders or head. I feel at heart that they are my real friends. The second thing that has earned my love and affection are the flowers. In winter season especially I have around me a large variety of blossoming flowers.

From morning till night different types of people come here and sit in the park. Sometimes there is a newly married couple. They are well dressed and in the best of spirits. They are in a happy mood and there is love and joy on their faces. Their jokes are most enjoyable. The bashfulness of the bride makes her look more charming. Sometimes an old couple comes. Having lost zest and joy in life the old man and woman look a picture of helplessness and grief. All the time they are discussing their family problems and the disloyalty of their grown up sons and daughters in law. When tears well up in their eyes, I have a great sympathy for them. I wish that I could share their grief and help them. Sometimes it is a party of merry makers who make the whole atmosphere resonant with their merry jokes and laughter. I feel happy with them in their happiness.

My mornings and evenings are the happiest times of my day. The early walkers moving about in the park look to be a picture of health. At that time there is an atmosphere of freshness and brightness in the park. In the evening, children come and play different games like hockey, foot ball, etc. Quite often they have a hot discussion among themselves. Sometimes there is a newly married couple. They are well dressed and in the best of spirits. They are in a happy mood and there is love and joy on their faces. Their jokes are most enjoyable. The bashfulness of the bride makes her look more charming. Sometimes an old couple comes. I have developed love for his face and movements, as he is a very simple and straight forward man.
