

My Aim in Life

Everybody has some aims in life. It is very important. A life without an aim is life a boat without a rudder. But choosing a career in such a cut throat age of competition is really a difficult task.

Different people have different aims in their life according to their tastes and temperament. Some people want to become technocrats like doctors, engineers, scientists while many want to become bureaucrats like IAS, IPS AND IFS.

Some dream to become educationists, while for others politics holds great attraction. A few are lured to pursue their career in anti-social activities. There are people who have a craze to become poets, writers and novelists. To say, different people, different choices.

I am not a highly ambitious man. I am modest by nature. I do not want to be a multi-millionaire. The profession of teaching has been very attractive to me. This has been my childhood dream. The sole aim of my life is to serve the society to become a good citizen. To me teaching appears to be the best way to serve the society.

I belong to the lower middle class of society. Naturally, I have to face several difficulties in my life. The difficulties encountered during the journey of my life made me realize that lack of education is the biggest problem to which I will devote my life to spread literacy to every nook and corner of society so as to remove the darkness of illiteracy. It is a shame that one-fourth of our population still do not know how to read and write even after over six decades of independence. In terms of women education, the picture is all the more gloomy. Unless we are educated, we cannot make all around progress.

I would be particularly sensitive to the needs of the weaker section of society. I would work hard to bring change in their lives. When this section of society is educated, we will have a totally different society. There will be no superstitions when they will be educated. I will always be available to attend their queries whatever arise. I will arrange extra classes for those who find it difficult to keep pace with the regular class.

I am fully aware that I'll have to face lots of hardships. A teacher's life is hard. He does not command the respect he deserves. This profession is looked down upon as of a lowly status. A teacher's life is full of drudgery. I will not be concerned for the earnings. I will try my best to make the students good citizens. I will help them in broadening their outlook. I'll groom their personality and shape their characters. I'll groom their personality and shape their characters. I'll try to inculcate in them good moral values. So that India have good citizens to take it on the path of progress and prosperity in which everyone has a dignified life full of equality of opportunities. According to great educationist and our former president Dr. S. Radhakrishnan, "Teachers are the custodians of the highest values."

The Profession I Want to Follow

Choosing a profession is not an easy task. A wrong choice can mar one's career and make one's whole life miserable.

So, the choice of a profession must be made very judiciously and that after long reflection and consultation with elders and other experienced people. In this regard, one's aptitude and bent of mind and general attitude towards life should not be ignored.

After considering all the pros and cons of the matter, I have decided to become a doctor. My main motivation came to me from the noble example set before me by my father.

My father is a renowned doctor of the town. He has a heart of gold as he is filled with milk of human kindness. He pursues the profession of a doctor with a spirit of dedication.

I want to follow in the footsteps of my father. I am a brilliant student. I'm particularly strong in science subjects. Biology is my favourite subject. I have a natural bent of mind for the medical courses.

So, I have decided to become a doctor. I belong to a well-to-do family and my parents can easily pay my fees.

My chief aim is to serve humanity. There is so much misery in the world. I want to mitigate it to whatever extent I can. I have decided that I will not charge heavy fees from patients. I'll treat poor patients without charging any fees. May God help me in my venture!

My Aim in Life

Aimless life is certainly a sin. Different people have different aims in life. Some aim at wealth, some at power, some at fame, some at business and some at education and knowledge. My aim is neither wealth nor fame. I wish to serve my country with the best of my talent. I love India and I really believe that everybody should put an effort to make it a great country. I want to become a doctor. It is a noble profession. In medical line, there is much more scope of service.

One can serve the patients everywhere in the country. This is my personal choice. My parents have not compelled me to select it. I wish to become a very successful doctor in future. So, I am studying hard to achieve my target. I have keen interest in the medical line, so I do not feel any trouble in studying at all.

After obtaining the medical degree, I plan to work in rural areas where there is much shortage of doctors. My father is a well-off man and I do not have any financial problem. I do not have the lust for money. I will visit the rural areas and will help poor people. It would be best sort of service. This will give me extreme satisfaction and that is the aim of my life.

I know, my profession is very dignified and it will help me to get peace and satisfaction in life. It provides one the best chances of service. Sympathy to human being is the sympathy to one's own self.

Aim of My Life

Every young man has an aim or ambition in life. A man without an aim cannot succeed. He cannot achieve his goal. In fact, it is an aim that makes a man active. Without aim a man is a useless creature.

Civilization is one of man's aims and his efforts to achieve it. The aim of my life is to become a doctor. There is a reason why I have chosen this career. Once one of my classmates fell ill.

As he was poor, he could not get proper medical aid. His condition grew worse day by day. When I went to see him, he looked at me helplessly.

After a few days of illness, he died. It gave me a terrible shock. I began to think about the suffering of people. I decided to become a doctor and do some service to the sick people.

I will study hard to qualify myself as a doctor. When I become a qualified doctor, I will move to the country side and set up a dispensary there. I am sorry to say that doctors wish to live in cities. They do not feel that their need in villages is greater.

But I would like to serve villages. I will work day and night to serve people. I will keep in mind that people need consolation and sympathy more than medicine.

I will not be money minded. I find that doctors have lost reputation because they are money minded. They have brought bad name to this noble profession. But I will not charge fee from poor patients.

I hope my dispensary will be model for other doctors. They must realize that there is a greater need of doctors in village. Real India lives in villages.

If health of villages is neglected, our country cannot make progress. Doctors must go to villages and nurse the suffering people crying for help.
