

Your Favorite Dress

The word 'dress' is a bug-bear to me. I do not know who started with the system of dressing. Why did Adam cover himself with leaves as soon as he tasted the forbidden fruit? God has sent all creatures to this world without any artificial dress. Why not learn to live with the natural dress one is born with?

Once humans learn this, one-third of their needs (from amongst food, clothing and shelter) would be over. Anyhow, it appears to be difficult to put the clock back and push mankind to the golden world of the Garden of Eden. I would, therefore, like to have the minimum of dress on my boy. A smart half-pant and a loose fitting T-shirt are all I need. In fact, this is my favorite dress even today. Most of the time when I am away from my official or formal routine, I rush to my cupboard and change myself into my favorite dress. I feel very agile, light and active in this dress. It consumes very little cloth and is the cheapest of all the dresses I wear. I recommend it should be made our national dress. Even schools should discard their uniforms in favor of this easy, less expensive and good looking dress.
