

Letter of Condolence “To a Friend on Death of his Wife”

I have been deeply grieved to read in the “Hindustan Times” of the death of your wife. I have tried to enter into that great distress of your heart at this, the greatest of all sorrows that a man is called upon to bear. My dear friend my heart goes in deepest sympathy to your at this time.

You do not need me to tell you how much everyone respected and loved Meena. She will be greatly missed all over the two countries by all who knew her.

Your terrible loss was upon everyone’s lips at Market this morning. I was proud to think that my friend stood so high in everyone affection and I was most touched by the deep and sincere sympathy everyone was expressing on your behalf.

So the whole countryside mourns with you at time and prays that your aching heart may be comforted in this great trial.

Yours sincere friend.
