Question 21

Read the source given below and answer the questions that follows:

Source : The Movement in the Towns

The movement started with middle-class participation in the cities. Thousands of students left government-controlled schools and colleges, headmasters and teachers resigned, and lawyers gave up their legal practices. The council elections were boycotted in most provinces except Madras, where the Justice Party, the party of the non-Brahmans, felt that entering the council was one way of gaining some power-something that usually only Brahmans had access to.

The effects of non-cooperation on the economic front were more dramatic. Foreign goods were boycotted, liquor shops picketed, and foreign cloth burnt in huge bonfires. The import of foreign cloth halved between 1921 and 1922, its value dropping from Rs. 102 crore to Rs. 57 crore. In many places merchants and traders refused to trade in foreign goods or finance foreign trade. As the boycott movement spread, and people began discarding imported clothes and wearing only Indian ones, production of Indian textile mills and handlooms went up.

Question 34

Read the sources given below and answer the questions that follow:

Source A - Production across countries

Until the middle of the twentieth century, production was largely organised within countries. What crossed the boundaries of these countries were raw material, food stuff and finished products. Colonies such as India exported raw materials and food stuff and imported finished goods. Trade was the main channel connecting distant countries. This was before large companies called multinational corporations (MNCs) emerged on the scene.

Source B - Foreign trade and integration of markets

Foreign trade creates an opportunity for the producers to reach beyond the domestic markets, i.e., markets of their own countries. Producers can sell their produce not only in markets located within the country but can also compete in markets located in other countries of the world. Similarly, for the buyers, import of goods produced in another country is one way of expanding the choice of goods beyond what is domestically produced.

Source C - Impact of globalisation in India

Globalisation and greater competition among producers – both local and foreign producers – has been of advantage to consumers, particularly the well-off sections in the urban areas. There is greater choice before these consumers who now enjoy improved quality and lower prices for several products. As a result, these people today, enjoy much higher standards of living than was possible earlier.

Source A - Production across countries

1. How are MNCs a major force in connecting the countries of the world?

Source B - Foreign trade and integration of markets

2. How does foreign trade become a main channel in connecting countries?

Source C - Impact of globalisation in India

3. How is globalisation beneficial for consumers?

Solution:

1. MNCs are spreading their production to other countries and generating employment connecting the countries of the world. They are helping in greater integration of economies.

2. a. Foreign trade helps explore international markets and go beyond domestic markets.

b. Producers can expand their markets by selling their products in the international markets.

c. Similarly, consumers are also offered more choice of products as goods are traded, imported from other countries.

3. a. Globalisation created opportunities in terms of investments, employment for many developing and underdeveloped countries and brought about greater integration of economies.

b. It has enhanced the choices of consumers, brought about increased movement of goods, people, ideas.

c. Interaction with other cultures has enlarged choices and created preferences. More and more products are available at lower prices.

d. It has led to the establishment of many foreign brands in the country, widening our choices catering to different sets of customers.

e. It has indeed expanded the scope of the market.

f. It has improved the quality of life and standard of living of the people.
