

If I Were a Millionaire

I believe in luck. I am sure that the gates of wealth will certainly be opened on me. That is why I purchase a lottery ticket every week. As soon as I become a millionaire, I shall fulfill all my earthly desires. I will spend each rupee wisely. I shall buy a good house and equip it with all the modern facilities. I shall earmark a big fund for the service of the suffering humanity. I shall keep the remaining money intact. I am told time and again by some pessimistic friends that riches have wings. They also tell me that uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. They discourage me by saying that poverty is a blessing and that sweet are uses of adversity. I have determined to cut off the wings of wealth when it comes to me. I shall make the best use of every penny. I shall invest my money usefully so that I remain rich for the whole of my life. I shall never become poor once the gates of wealth are opened on me. That is why I tell the prophets of doom to keep their counsels to themselves. I continue to try my luck without getting discouraged.
