

Handsome is That Handsome Does

Essay No. 01

Almost everybody loves beauty in one form or the other. Most of us get captivated when we see beauty in physical form. Thus, we love to see a beautiful girl, child, animal plant or even scenery. We love the sight of a handsome young man. There is nothing wrong in beholding physical beauty in a platonic mood of mind.

On the other hand, a person may be ugly or he may be unattractive physically. He may not even be able to express himself. Medical scientists tell us that certain people, particularly children, intelligent otherwise may not be able to express themselves and seen dullards, as they suffer from a malady known as 'dyslexia' among such people.

Thus, real beauty is inner beauty, may be intellectual or spiritual. That is why it is said that handsome is that handsome does.

Essay No. 02

Handsome is That Handsome Does

This proverb points out wherein lies a person's real beauty. Generally, man is regarded handsome if he has fair complexion, curly hair, dark eyes and rosy cheeks. But this view of beauty is defective. It is only Physical beauty. In most cases it is the result of make-up. Behind attractive appearance is hidden an ugly face. This beauty is skin-deep. It is short-lived. It is not natural. Nor is it of much worth. Handsome is he who does handsome deeds. He who has good character, noble nature and high thoughts is in reality handsome. Appearances do not make man handsome. A man may have a smiling face yet he may be a wicked person at heart. A goodly apple may be a rotten inside. In history, we come across many such persons as did not possess physical beauty but they were men of principles. They lived and died for certain ideals. They gave their lives for the welfare of mankind. Their thoughts and actions have immortalized them. They have become household names. They are remembered for their supreme sacrifices and selfless actions. They are regarded as handsome because handsome is that handsome does.

Essay No. 03

Handsome is that Handsome Does

Appearances can often deceive because a handsome face may have an ugly heart for beauty does not lie in rosy cheeks or beautiful eyes alone but in a person's character and heart. Handsome is he whose deeds are handsome, because beauty is not permanent and it diminishes with time while the deeds done by a person are permanent. They are remembered even after the death of a person. Some of the great thinkers were not handsome in the physical form yet they are still remembered because of their handsome deeds.