Q. 5. Kamala wants to purchase a new vehicle. Explain her what are the steps to be taken and what documents are to be produced for the registration of a vehicle?

Answer : Research

Choosing the right car can be difficult, and it's even more complicated when you're thinking about interest rates, monthly payments, color choices and the options. The best way to do this often involves reading reviews from experts, who can help Kamala eliminate mediocre cars and focus on the best ones.

Secure Financing

The next step in the process is to secure financing, trying to negotiate a car's price while simultaneously working out an interest rate and loan terms can be very time-consuming. Securing financing beforehand -- from a bank or credit union, for example -- gives you more power in the negotiating process. It also lets you know where your credit stands before you visit a dealership.

Test drive

For many shoppers, this step is possibly the most important of them all. She should not just settle for a short 5- or 10-minute test drives around the block. Take a long, thorough drive, no matter how persistent the salesperson is that a shorter route is better.

Negotiate a Lower Price

It's very rarely true that the dealership is advertising its best price. Usually, car dealers advertise one price, but they're willing to come down from that figure if shoppers negotiate. This is especially true on a sales close, which is almost always the last day of the month.
