For example:

You may say, "I am not fond of homework."

Your partner may reply, "But my sister helps me with my lessons at home, and that gives a boost to my marks."

Writing

Question A:

This story has a lot of rhyming words, as a poem does. Can you write out some parts of it like a poem, so that the rhymes come at the end of separate lines?

For example:

Patrick never did homework. "Too boring," he said.

He played baseball and hockey and Nintendo instead.

Answer A:

- The man was too small in size
He was true and wise.
- The elf promised to all that
As Patrick saved him from cat
- Patrick love the paly not work
Always keep pending homework

Question B:

Look at these sentences.

1. "Too boring," he said.
2. Cleaned his room, did his chores.

When we speak, we often leave out words that can easily be guessed. We do not do this when we write, unless we are trying to write as we speak (as in the story).

So, if we were to write carefully, we would say:

- "Homework is too boring," he said.
- He cleaned his room and did his chores.

Question C:

Rewrite the following incomplete sentences carefully, so that the reader does not have to guess what is left out.

1. more and more books
2. too difficult
3. got up late, missed the bus
4. solved the mystery

Answer C:

1. My teacher read more and more books.

- What is it about?
- Do you find it funny? If so, why?
- Do you think a cartoon is a serious drawing? Why or why not?

Answer D:

- It is about a parent's concern for the betterment of the child to work hard (labour).
- Yes, the cartoon is really funny. Father orders the child to work hard (labour) with studies. But he forbids the boy to read the laws against child labour.
