The world as we know is primarily made of two categories of people - the manufacturers and consumers. In order to sell their wares, manufacturers have to create awareness about their products or services. This message is intended for a target consumer base.

Advertising provides the perfect message and placing this message on the appropriate medium ensures maximum reach in minimum investment. Even in our day-to-day life, we often need to resort to either employing services, buying products or to advertise for the services we might be providing.

Before we commence to understand in detail, what advertisements are, it is important to see the weightage that has been placed on this short writing topic.

According to the latest CBSE syllabus for class XI, the Writing Section includes Advertisement Writing as a component to assess your writing skills in the short format.

Structure

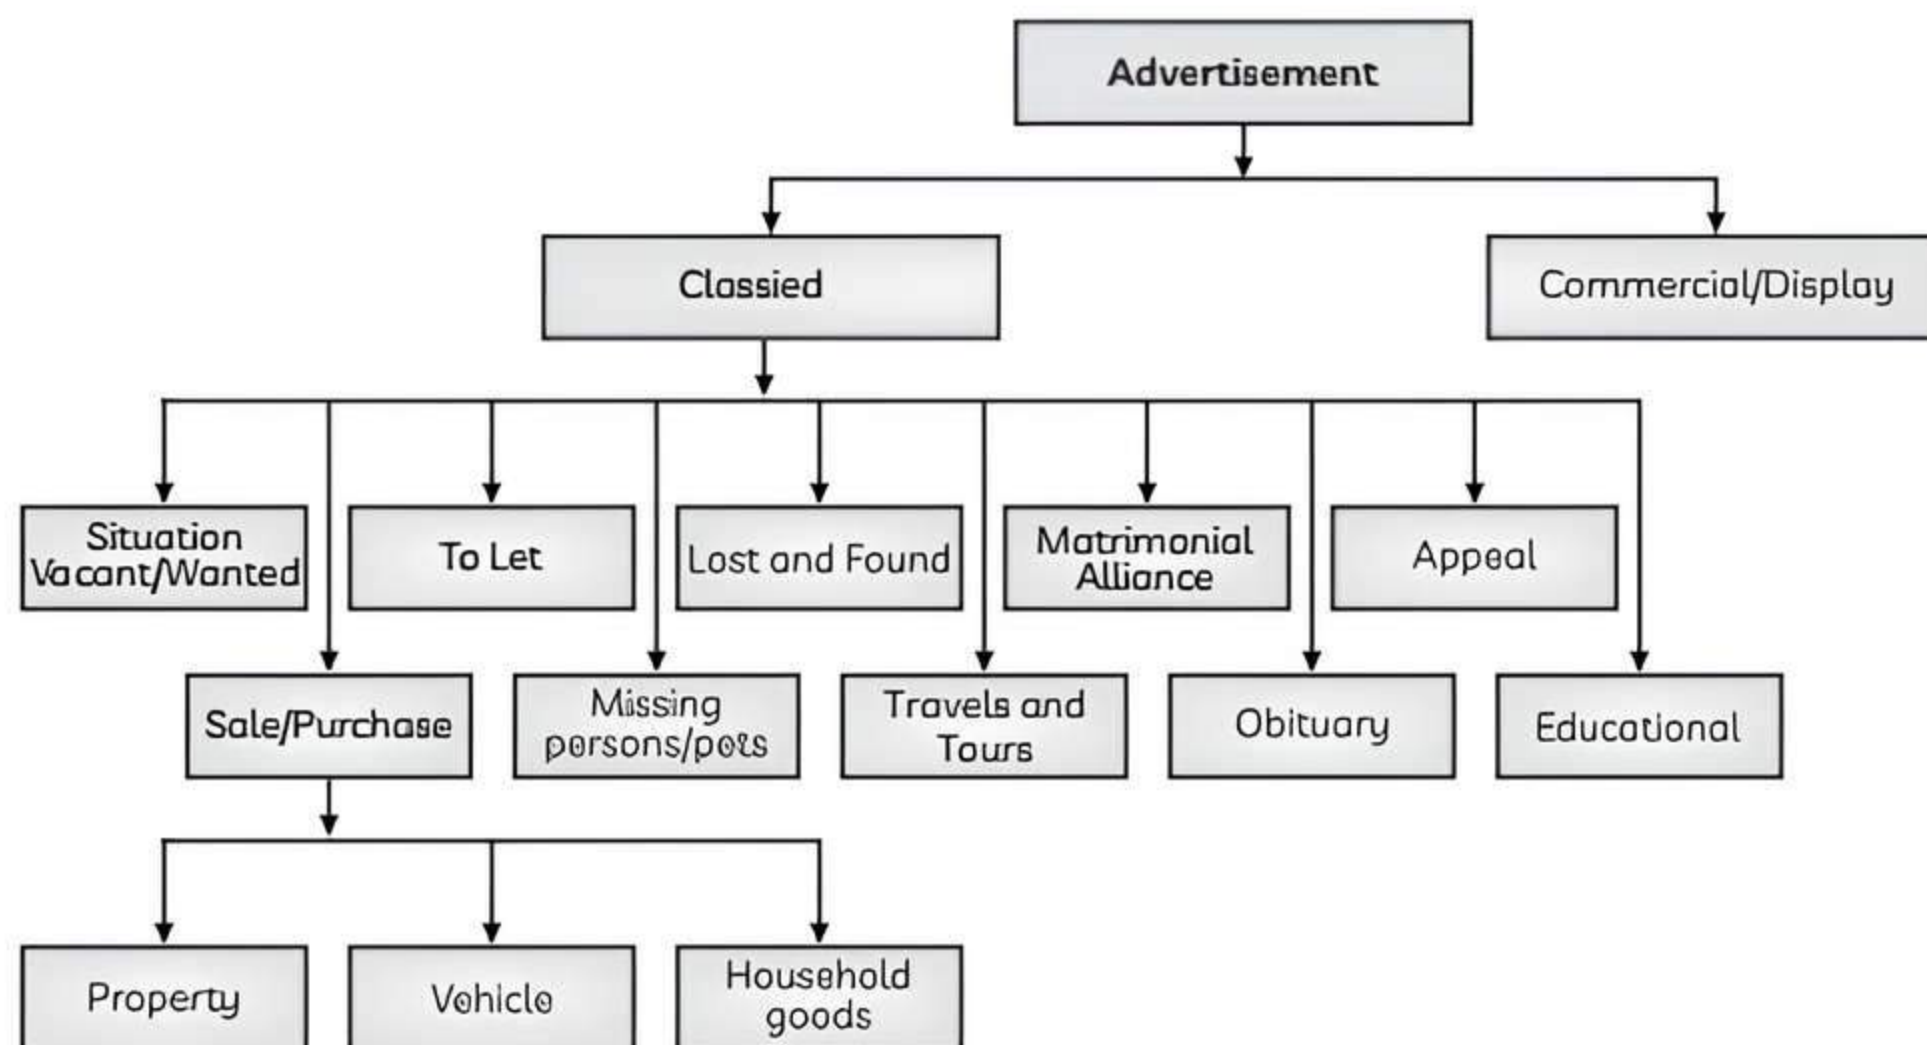

Types of Advertisements

Advertisements are of two types:

- I. Classified Advertisements
- II. Commercial or Display Advertisements

It can be well understood with the help of the flowchart given:

I. CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified advertisements are like short messages. Our newspapers/magazines feature a large number of such ads on a regular basis. The uniqueness of this type of ad and the reason for its immense popularity, is that they cost lesser than commercial ads, mainly because they occupy little space. Brevity is unique to classified ads. The message they convey is lucid and succinct, but effective. It commonly feature in columns of newspapers and magazines. Classifieds often advertise available jobs, or people seeking goods and property for purchase or sale. They also serve the purpose of informing or seeking information about some person or belongings which may have gone missing.

Important points to Remember

- Do not clutter the advertisement by using any design or block around the written content.
- Use a box to write the classified advertisement, as this will keep it distinct from the rest of the page.
- Employ attention grabbing words and catchy phrases.
- Use simple language.
- State facts as they are.
- It is not mandatory to write the ad in complete sentences, since the focus is on saying more in less words.
- Keep it formal.
- Keep it short (not more than 50 words).
- State the purpose of the ad clearly at the top. For example: Mention if the advertisement pertains to Wanted, situation Vacant, Missing, To Let, etc.

- Make sure to include all the important details by using commas.

II. COMMERCIAL OR DISPLAY ADVERTISEMENTS

Commercial or Display ads, as they are commonly known, could be an announcement of an event, an inauguration ceremony, a promotion or a simple discount declaration of the product/service it is advertising. This type of ad may be published in a newspaper or magazine, or released simultaneously over several mediums such as TV, radio, Internet, etc. as part of a synchronised media campaign.

It is important to understand that the purpose of commercial ads as compared to other ads is to attract attention. The spending on these ads is a lot more than classified ads since they occupy more space. They are also visually more attractive and employ creative design/language elements to entice its target audience. Characterised by catchy slogans and wordplay, these ads are a fancier version of classified ads.

150 GLORIOUS YEARS

DELHI'S MOST POPULAR MUSEUM

Technique

There is no hard and fast rule about the format of commercial ads. It is completely at the discretion of the individual/agency creating the ad to use any/all elements of design and language to make a creative ad. The whole idea is to ensure it meets its purpose, which may be to create awareness/sell/announce discount.

However, some imperatives include:

- Name of the Institute/Brand/Organisation/Company at the behest of which the ad has been inserted/broadcast/relayed.
- It must carry details regarding the product/event/service/educational course.
- The ad must announce ongoing offers/discounts/sales/early bird prizes on purchase/subscription if any.
- Since these ads have the advantage of more space, high resolution illustrations/photos are used to maximise their impact.
